Army Reserve surgeons practice their skills in the full range of general surgery. in up-to-date facilities. You could be part of a skilled surgical team using the most advanced techniques and equipment, such as computer tomography, microsurgical instrumentation, and laser surgery. Army Reserve physicians can often attend civilian and military-sponsored continuing health education courses and seminars, with all or part of the expense paid by the Army.

In sum, Army Reserve gives you the opportunity to expand your horizons. Why not let a part-time Reserve medical practice revitalize for you the professional satisfaction that is a physician's greatest reward?

Yours truly,

M.P. McGinley
